

REJECTED BY WOMAN HE LOVED

William C. Mahoney, Harvard Graduate, Rejected by Pretty Parisian Dress Designer, Drinks Carboic Acid.

REFUSED HIM MANY TIMES.

Mme. Manon Dubois Says She Discouraged Him Constantly and Even Had Him Arrested to Force Him to Abandon His Calls.

The body of William C. Mahoney, a suicide, the son of a respected and wealthy family and a Harvard graduate, lies to-day unclaimed in an undertaking establishment at No. 355 West Thirty-eighth street.

Manon Dubois, a pretty Frenchwoman, who gets $75 a week for designing dresses and who has a husband, in France, is in her apartments at No. 355 West Thirty-sixth street, overcome through the slight her rejected suitor after drinking a vial of acid in her rooms.

Mme. Dubois landed in Boston from Paris three years ago without a dollar. Mahoney, who was then thirty-three years old and whose home was in Boston, met her and became her friend. His aunt, Mrs. Driscoll, conducted Boston's most fashionable ladies' tailoring establishment. He spoke to his aunt and secured for Mrs. Dubois a position.

Was an Immediate Success.

She was an immediate success. She was able to put "that something" into dresses which only the French know how. Mrs. Driscoll opened large dress-making parlors at No. 9 East Thirtieth street, New York, and brought Manon here as designer.

Mahoney followed. He fell in love with the little French woman. She insists that she did everything to discourage him. She told him of her husband and two little children she had left in France. That did not cool his ardor. He insisted on calling. Often the door was closed in his face. In the mean time, Manon was becoming acquainted with other men, New York men, and while they were welcome callers, Mahoney was barred.

Eventually his attentions were so persistent that she asked the police to keep him away. He was arrested on her solicitation twice and taken to the police station, where the captain talked to him.

Recently he began drinking. While under the influence of liquor he called several times recently at the young woman's apartments, but the maid at the door always refused him admittance. About 10 o'clock last night he called for his last visit. The maid opened the door and he brushed by her and ran to the apartments of the dress designer.

Dies in Her Presence.
She was entertaining a young woman friend. Manon and her caller tried to rush from the room. Mahoney stopped Mrs. Dubois and asked a final question if she would marry him.

As she said "No" he raised the bottle of carboic acid and seared his flesh he fell to the floor. Manon and her caller ran from the room, and then he called to the police. When the police arrived, Marie Lucie Lambert, the aged grandmother and housekeeper for Mme. Dubois, was bending over him, but he was dead.

While Mahoney's body is unclaimed the undertaker says he has a telegram from Mrs. Driscoll, the aunt, whose home is in Boston, saying that she will be in New York to-day.

To Return Instantly to Paris.
Little Mme. Dubois was greatly excited when an Evening World reporter called on her to drive a street-car.

"I'm going right back to Paris, and my husband and children," she said. "I'm going to drive a street-car, and out of this awful thing. I do love my husband, and I am not going to try to get a divorce."

"It was awful of him to do that thing here. He wanted me to marry him and he couldn't drive a street-car. I thought he is a graduate of Harvard. He didn't have to work and study at anything except finding molecules under a microscope and I guess there is many such men. He never paid it back. I hated him. He was no good. I became acquainted with him when I first came to America. I boarded in his mother's house at No. 125 Beacon street, Boston, before I came here. She was a very nice lady and this hurt her much. But I cannot stand this American love—you call it? I go back to Paris Tuesday. They do not love so much, so strenuous—you call it there?"

During the night she had written a word to prepare the body for shipment to Boston.

SUICIDE IS SON OF RICH MANUFACTURER.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—William C. Mahoney is known by many in the Back Bay district of Boston. He was the son of John Mahoney, of Waverly, N. Y., the wealthy owner of a leather manufacturing establishment at that place, with offices in New York City. His mother has apartments at No. 17 Herford street, this city.

This son was connected with a leading ladies' tailoring house in the Back Bay, but most of his time was spent in New York. A telephone message has been received by friends here announcing the young man's death.

MANON DUBOIS, FOR LOVE OF WHOM MAHONEY DIED.

THREE MAIDS CATCH A THIEF.

Man Who Attempts to Get Away with a Pocketbook Is Pursued and Run Down by Victim and Friends.

CAUGHT AT LAST GASP.

Three exceedingly pretty young women appeared before Magistrate Mayo in the Yorkville Court this morning and told a dramatic story of how they had pursued a bold highway robber up Second avenue for nearly a quarter of a mile and finally caught him and delivered him over to the police.

These young women were Mollie Sindel, a stenographer, of No. 147 Forsyth street; Clara Rosenberg, of No. 171 Forsyth street, and Clara Hoffman, of No. 215 East Tenth street, and this is Miss Sindel's story of their chase:

"We were walking along Second avenue, near Sixth street, when all of a sudden a man jostled me and as I shrank away grasped my pocketbook and dashed off through the crowd. For a moment I was frightened. Then I became very angry and made up my mind that I was not going to be robbed without an effort to regain my property."

"I picked up my skirts and calling to my two friends to follow I started off after the robber, who I could see dodging through the crowd about a block ahead."

"We are all good runners, but I know we never ran so fast before in our lives. I don't know how I did it, but my feet seemed to fly over the pavement. I was almost in reach of the man when I felt that I could not continue the pace another foot. I made one great effort, however, and caught him by the arm and clung to him my feet giving way from under me. The crowd closed in about him and soon a policeman came and took him to the Fifth street station."

"There was only $2 in my pocketbook, but it was mine and I was going to lose it without a struggle, though if my friends had not helped me by joining in the chase I might not have been able to do it."

The bold highwayman who could not outrun these three athletic young girls was William Coyne, nineteen years old, of No. 286 Eighth street, who was taken into custody by the Magistrate by saying that he had been drinking and did not know what place he had been held in $1,000 bail for Special Sessions.

BABY DRANK LINIMENT.

Three-Year-Old Was Pumped Out and Will Recover.

Mrs. Mary Flannigan, of No. 523 East Seventy-third street, took her three-year-old son, Johnnie, on a visit to a friend at No. 346 East Seventy-eighth street, Johnnie's street during the visit was spent in investigating, while his mother was conversing. He found a bottle of liniment in a cabinet. The contents of the bottle a few minutes later, when it reached Johnnie's stomach, furnished Mrs. Flannigan and her hostess with an interesting topic.

Johnnie was pumped out at the Presbyterian Hospital by Dr. Kaetor, who took the young man to the hospital in an ambulance. Johnnie will recover.

PICKED THE WRONG TOWN.

W. C. T. U. Can't Find a Barless Hall in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 19.—White ribbons didn't know how important beer was to Milwaukee when they chose it as the place for the next convention of the National W. C. T. U. The fact was brought to their attention when the managers looked for a hall in which to hold the convention.

Every hall in Milwaukee is equipped with a beer just the same as it is in the other cities. This architectural feature peculiar to the town may result in a change of place for the convention.

The search so far for a beer-barless hall has been unsuccessful.

6 YOUNG WOMEN FACED THE JUDGE

They Had Disturbed the Neighbors and Rude Detectives Took Them from Their Elegant Home to Gloomy Cells.

ALL GORGEOUSLY GOWNED.

The swish of silken skirts, the flutter of feathery plumes and the rustle of soft brocades and rich laces were the predominant sounds at the opening of the West Side Court this morning when a half dozen young women were arraigned before Magistrate Hogan by Capt. Schmittberger's detectives charged with a breach of the peace in being too boisterous at their home at No. 115 West Forty-seventh street.

The detectives who invaded the young women's home last night because, as they said, the hilarity within was disturbing the rest of the neighbors, described the house to the Magistrate as one furnished with even more than Oriental luxury. They said that the halls were covered with heavy silken carpets in which the feet sank softly. The walls were hung with rich tapestries and silken brocades, in which were set long mirrors in dazzling gold frames. The furniture said that serving men in liveries and maids in lace caps and embroidered aprons flitted about the rooms of the palatial house, carrying trays bearing bottles of rare wines and steaming viands in painted china and cut-glass dishes.

The furniture of the different rooms, the brie-a-brac and graperies were all in harmony with the lavish furnishings of the hallway. In one large room, which was fitted up in Moorish fashion, with hanging lamps and censers giving forth delicious odors, divans covered with silks and satins and chairs of inlaid and carved wood, they came upon the half-dozen offenders whom they arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct. These young women, they said, were dressed in low-cut gowns and their arms and shoulders were sprinkled with glittering diamonds.

This morning every one of the young women wore over her tailor-made suit a set of costly furs. When they were fined $5 each by the Magistrate they were taken to the Fifth street station, where they were dressed in low-cut gowns and their arms and shoulders were sprinkled with glittering diamonds.

SUFFERED WITH CATARRH ALL MY LIFE

Miss Crow says: "I Have Had Catarrh Ever Since I Can Remember—Pe-ru-na Cured Me."

MISS NELLIE CROW.

1114 Edith Place, Memphis, Tenn., writes: "As I was cured of a chronic case of catarrh of the head, I am only too glad to recommend Peru-na. I have had more or less catarrh ever since I can remember, and have tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions, and while some things would help me for the time being, it is to Peru-na that I owe a perfect cure. It was recommended to me by a friend who had been cured through its use, and it not only cured the catarrh, but toned up the entire system." Nellie Crow.

Catarrh is a Disease That Does Not Cure Itself.

There are a vast multitude of people who consider that the above statement is the first place, catarrh is a life-long disease unless cured. Catarrh is a disease that does not cure itself, and is not easily cured by the best of remedies. The doctors all try to treat catarrh. Their remedies generally fail to cure. The people first go to a doctor and give him a faithful trial. After they have tried one doctor, they generally try another. Sometimes three or four. As a rule, however, they are generally obliged to resort to Peru-na at last. In Peru-na they find what they have been seeking—a perfect cure. A cure that lasts. A host of people have spent thousands of dollars to get rid of catarrh and afterward were cured by a half-dozen bottles of Peru-na.

Many Have Catarrh and Don't Know It.

Catarrh is almost a natural cure. Nearly everybody has had it more or less. A majority of people who have catarrh in its incipient stage don't know it. Catarrh will produce so many different conditions that it is a wonder but it is so often not recognized.

Catarrh will produce deafness. Will affect the eyesight.

Catarrh will enlarge the tonsils and will make the throat sore.

Catarrh will cause consumption, dyspepsia, kidney disease and so many other maladies that it is no wonder that doctors fail to recognize it.

Female Catarrh Very Common Among Women—Pe-ru-na Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

Mrs. M. E. Jenkins, President Victoria Lodge, Queen's Daughters, in a letter from 121 Goyean Street, Windsor, Ont., Can., writes: "I heartily endorse Peru-na as an excellent tonic for a weak and broken down woman, for such I was before I began taking Peru-na, and it really worked wonders with my system. My health is excellent now, and whenever I feel languid or nervous I take a few doses of Peru-na and it goes right to the spot. A number of my friends have taken it and are universal in its praise."—Mrs. M. E. Jenkins.

Peru-na cures catarrh wherever located. Peru-na cures catarrh in whatever form. Accept no substitute for Peru-na. Peru-na is the only systemic remedy for catarrh yet devised.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

TITLED AMERICANS GET NURSE'S MONEY

Was Servant in Their Family, Left $40,000, and Cut Off Niece with $5,000.

When the contest of the will of Margaret Ann Bergen, the aged nurse who left all her life savings except $3,000 over to her beloved mistress, was called by Surrogate Thomas to-day, none of the score of forgotten relatives, none of the court and no lawyer answered "ready."

So the Surrogate admitted the will to probate by default.

Margaret Ann Bergen was eighty-six when she died in Paris last spring at the home of the two titled American women whom she had nursed and tended in their childhood, the Baroness Yolande Margherita. She was born on Mary Eliza von Zedwitz and was the quise Mary Gwendoline de Monstres-Morville, who were the Misses Hynd, of New York, before their marriage to the Baron and Marquis respectively.

The old woman had been their mother's nurse in childhood, too, and was devotedly loved by her young mistresses. She had two French lawyers draw her will on St. Patrick's Day and a few days after, she died.

She bequeathed $5,000 to Margaret Bergen, a niece in America, and the rest to the Baroness and her sister, the Marquise, with a request that she be buried in Calvary Cemetery in Paris.

The will was offered for probate here, as the old woman had always stoutly claimed New York as her home and America as her country.

Distant relatives entered a contest for the nurse's money, and many witnesses were examined in Paris by United States Consul-General Gowdy, but the failure to put in an appearance here Surrogate Thomas says it is all directed.

The nurse's property will go as she directed.

Capt. Walsh's detectives in the Tenderloin raided another alleged disorderly house in Twenty-ninth street near Sixth avenue. They arrested Fannie Jones, twenty-nine years old, the alleged proprietress and five women.

GIRL BABY, ALAS! FOR ITALY'S QUEEN.

Which Also Wants Heir to Throne of the Czars.

ROME, Nov. 19.—The Queen of Italy gave birth to a daughter this morning. Mother and child, it is announced, are doing well. The new princess will be christened Maifida.

Both the King and Queen had anxiously hoped that the baby would be a boy and consequently heir to the throne. There is also much disappointment throughout the country, where a little Prince of Rome was generally hoped for.

The first child born to the King and Queen was also a daughter, Princess Yolande Margherita. She was born on May 1, 1891.

The accouchement occurred a month earlier than expected. The King yesterday was shooting on the island of Monte Christo, when he was suddenly summoned home. He boarded a yacht and was shooting on the island of Monte Christo, when he was suddenly summoned home.
